Berlin Owns Master List Of Traitors Available In United States

WASHINGTON, July 14—Evidence prepared for the trial of eight Nazi saboteurs before a military commission in Washington disclosed today that the German high command in Berlin has carefully drawn up a long master list of persons in the United States to serve as traitors in this country.

As the sabotage trial entered its sixth day, Department of Justice officials also planned to move swiftly against the 14 persons—six women and eight men—who were arrested for aiding and sheltering the eight saboteurs after the latter were landed on American shores from German submarines.

Conferences were under way to determine whether the 14 will be tried before military or civil courts. It was expected that justice officials will file treason warrants against all 14, and then place them on trial for their lives in the federal courts in Chicago and New York.

Behind the 14 arrests, which include the mother, father and uncle of one saboteur and the wife of another, was one of the most amazing stories of international espionage.

WILHELMINA OF NETHERLANDS IN NEW YORK CITY

NEW YORK, July 14—Wilhelmina Helena Pauline Marie, 61-year-old queen of the Netherlands, got her first glimpse of New York today when her auto, en route from Hyde Park, crossed the Westchester-Bronx county line and was accorded the official accolade by Mayor F. H. La Guardia.

The smiling monarch was escorted to the Waldorf-Astoria hotel preparatory to a reception at City Hall.

Tonight more than 4,000 members of New York's Dutch colony will crowd the Astor hotel ballroom to pay respects to the queen. Protocol demands that all 4,000 be crowded at one time into the ballroom where about 300 of the guests will be presented to her majesty.

The Dutch monarch flew from England to Canada last month. She has been staying with her daughter and granddaughters at Lee, Mass. She will return there, probably tomorrow afternoon.

PATROL CRAFT CREW RESCUED

U. S. Coast Guard Removes 13 From Boat Ashore Near Golden Gate

SAN FRANCISCO, July 14—Heroic and prompt action of the U. S. coast guard early today was credited with saving the lives of 13 crew members of a naval patrol craft which went aground off the California coast near the San Francisco Golden Gate.

The ship, described by the 12th naval district as a naval inshore patrol vessel, was an 83-foot converted fishing boat.

Three officers and ten enlisted men were taken off the disabled craft by breeches buoy in less than two hours after it struck a sand bar.

Ensign W. B. Sims of Moberly, Mo., commanding officer, said his ship went aground so violently that the galley stove was torn loose from the deck bolts.

Sims said the radio operator immediately notified their base and rockets, flares and machine guns were fired to attract attention from the shore.

In short order the coast guard arrived and a breeches buoy line was made fast to the stricken vessel at the first shot. Two hours later the entire crew together with the ship's log and other documents were safely ashore.

GUTTART SHOT IN BATTLE

Heydrich Pattern Followed; Arrests Made As French Observe Holiday

LONDON, July 14—Assassination of another Gestapo chieftain in Nazi-occupied Europe was revealed in London today coincident with disclosure that 700 Yugoslav patriots have been slain in reprisal.

The victim was Major Helm, Nazi Gestapo chief of Zagreb, capital of Croatia.

Announcement of Helm's killing was made by Yugoslav government circles in London and followed by only two days disclosure that Erich Guttart, Gestapo chief of the Lublin district of Poland, had been killed in a battle between German storm-troopers and Polish guerrillas led by a Russian.

Both killings followed the pattern of the assassination of Reinhard Heydrich, second only to Heinrich Himmler in command of the Gestapo.

Yugoslav circles in London said that immediately after Helm was killed, the Germans at Zagreb launched ferocious reprisals, hurling bombs into fashionable restaurants, killing innocent persons without discrimination.

Officials did not estimate the size of the expansion program in regard to meat and milk.

The requirements committee was expected to approve allocation of approximately 1,800 tons of metal needed to attain the desired expansion of vegetable drying facilities; 200 tons needed for the meat dehydration program, and also the milk and egg requirements.

Russian Communiques Say Nazi Attempt To Break Defenses Fails; Kalinin Region Sees Outbreak Of Vital Operations

TERRIFIC STRUGGLE RAGING ON DON

British Aided By Australian Soldiers Hold All Territory Captured From Rommel; Planes Play Major Role

Overcoming Nazi parachutists, flame throwers and some of the heaviest tanks yet thrown into action, Soviet defenders of Moscow and the Caucasus repelled wave after wave of German troops today.

On the Kalinin front, where a grave menace to Moscow developed overnight, the German offensive was checked at two points and the Nazi area of operations considerably reduced.

Stubborn Russian resistance blasted any Nazi hopes of launching a new "blitz" attack against the capital.

Front-line dispatches from the south said that the Voronezh sector was turned into a "veritable hell" when the Germans started using flame-throwers after dropping great numbers of parachutists in the Kalinin region.

Nazi Left Flank Hit The Russians were able to counter-attack, however, throwing huge numbers of men against the left flank of main enemy forces west of the Don.

Huge waves of tanks were hurled against the German anti-tank barriers, piercing them at weak points and inflicting heavy losses on the enemy. The German line was bent toward the south.

Marshal Semyon Timoshenko has launched a furious and powerful counter-attack against the enemy in the Voronezh area to relieve the terrific pressure on his Don river lines, according to an Exchange Telegraph company dispatch from Moscow. A mighty struggle was being waged along the banks of the Don.

Meanwhile, the German central army before Moscow was rapidly developing a new offensive on the Rzhev-Kalinin sector northwest of Moscow. Paratroops dropped from formations of huge transport planes descended behind the Soviet lines, but the maneuver was declared to have failed. The paratroops were annihilated, according to Moscow reports, which said that most of the parachutists failed to reach the Russian earth alive.

But Soviet communiques admitted that on this sector they were forced to give ground before the numerical superiority of the enemy.

The new German drive developed a grave threat to Moscow itself, less than 150 miles from the battle area.

Aims at Stalingrad On the lower Don the enemy was making a tremendous push aimed at Stalingrad, the vital Russian industrial center on the Volga. The drive is approaching the river Chopper, 75 miles south. (Continued on Page Two)

Intrigues, espionage and attempted sabotage ever uncovered by the FBI.

Plot Preceded War

It was learned that the German high command in Berlin laid the groundwork for the daring plot many months before the war broke out. Instead of calling German nationals back to their fatherland when the conflict with the United States appeared inevitable, the Nazis actually ordered most of them to stay in this country.

Only a few skilled workers which it needed were recalled by the Reich. The others, which included ex-Nazi army and navy officials, were told to remain, and await orders. The names of those told to stay were relayed to the Gestapo in Berlin by German consul officials. From the names, the Nazi high command prepared its list of potential spies, saboteurs and persons it believes will help enemy agents. How many names are on the list is unknown.

The eight saboteurs now on trial were given the names of some persons on the list when they left Berlin. One such person, according to the FBI, was Helmut Leiner, of Astoria, L. I. Others, the FBI said, were Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wilhelm Froehling, of Chicago, the uncle and aunt of Herbert Haupt, 22, one of the eight Nazi saboteurs now facing the firing squad or gallows.

Froehlings Important

The FBI declared the Froehlings as "important contacts for the German sabotage agents." The saboteurs, according to Chief G-Man J. Edgar Hoover, planned to use the Froehling home in Chicago as a "hiding place and a clearing house for the exchange of information."

Leiner and the Froehlings were among the 14 "contacts" apprehended. The scheming 14 also included Mr. and Mrs. Hans Max Haupt, the father and mother of young Haupt. The elder Haupts were alleged by the FBI to have known that their son was a secret German agent here for sabotage work. They bought him an auto with funds with which the Gestapo had furnished young Haupt, and also kept money for him.

The FBI still was investigating one phase of the case against the elder Haupts. When they were arrested, $2,550 was found concealed in their homes. An additional $900 was recovered from a friend of the elder Haupt. Authorities were trying to determine why the father had split up the money given him for safekeeping by his son. The question he will be forced to answer is whether he intended keeping the money for himself or cashed it as a fund for young Haupt to make a getaway.

Nearly every one of the eight saboteurs, who had a total of about $149,000 on them when they were arrested, had given friends in this country $2,000 or $3,000 to keep for them. Besides Mrs. Haupt and Mrs. Froehling, the women arrested as "contacts" included Mrs. Maria Kerling and Miss Hedwig Engemann, both of New York, and Mrs. Emma Jaques and Mrs. Otto Wergin, of Chicago.

Wife Of Suspect

Mrs. Kerling is the wife of Edward John Kerling, 33, another one of the Nazi suspects on trial. Arrested with her was Ernest Herman Kerkhof, who was said to have been "intimately associated" with Mrs. Kerling while her husband was away attending a sabotage school in Germany. Both knew that Kerling had returned aboard a submarine but failed to report it to authorities, it was charged.

Other "contracts" among the 14 changed bill of large denominations for the saboteurs and otherwise tried to aid and shelter them. It was believed that authorities would try to complete the military trial of the eight saboteurs before starting hearings for the "contacts."

There was no indication as to when the present spy trial would begin. The government is still preparing witnesses before the court, it is sitting in a heavily guarded room in the Department of Justice building. Guards inside the courtroom were unarmed to prevent any possible move by the defendants to make a getaway. How- ever, guards in the halls outside were heavily armed. They include regular Army troops and G-

Sabotage Wave Reported

The BBC reported a "wave of sabotage" on French railways and the arrest of more hostages as the people rose to celebrate the storming of the Bastille, CBS continued.

"In connection with the French national holiday, commemorating the storming of the Bastille, further news of the resistance of French patriots to the German occupation authorities is reported," BBC said. "A whole wave of sabotage against railway installations at Boulogne, and other points is reported."

"In a district, on the border between occupied and unoccupied France, the police are still engaging in mopping up operations, picking up hostages who are charged with being Communists."

"The German commander of northern France, General Falkenhausen has made an announcement to the effect that a large number of hostages has been taken. The German military commander of one district has announced that 20 persons, alleged to be Communists have been arrested, charged with acts of sabotage."

FILLING STATIONS GATHER 125,968 POUNDS OF SCRAP

Official reports Tuesday show that Pickaway county filling stations in the recent scrap rubber drive collected 125,968 pounds of the material. The figure for this county represents a per capita collection of 4.7 pounds.

Persons in charge of the oil companies' effort expressed their satisfaction over success of the three week project stating that the net collections were high, inasmuch as the drive closely followed a general scrap collection in the county, which brought local scrap dealers' supplies above normal.

Collections made through these channels are not included in the above figure but approximately 80,000 pounds of rubber was in junkmen's storerooms when the drive began.

STEEL TORN AWAY DURING FLOOD BEING RECLAIMED

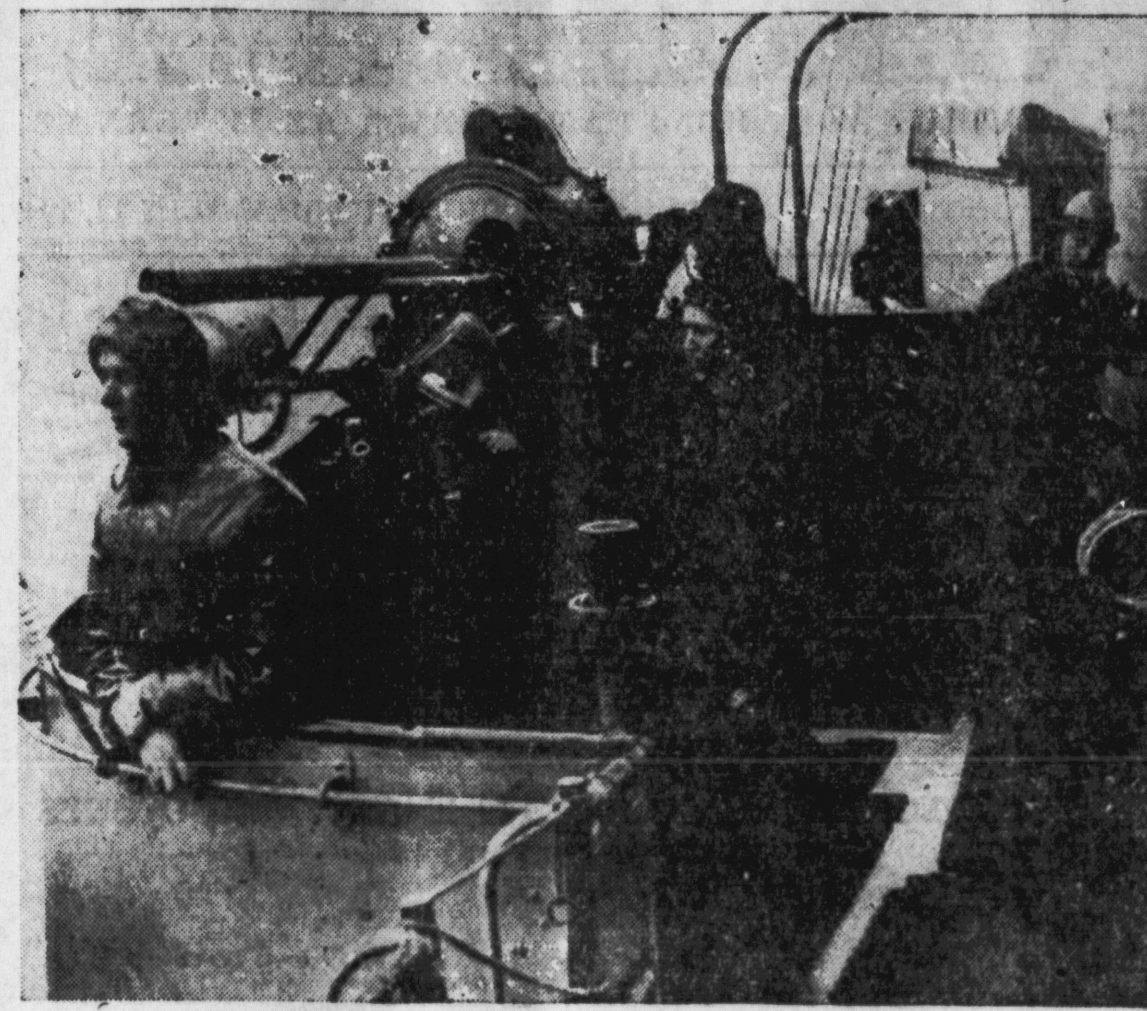

State highway workers have resumed construction of a new steel bridge over Laurel creek at Laurelville after a "flash flood" last week wrecked all work completed at that time. New pilings are being placed for the structure and the super structure steel that was torn loose in the recent storm is being reclaimed. The workers are heating the bent frameworks and straightening them for use in the bridge.

Officials have stated that it will probably be some time next week before the work can be brought up as far as it was before the flood struck.

"Please don't hesitate to write us, accordingly, and we will guarantee to see that you are taken care of."

Wolfkell's prompt reply said: "You ask if I need work clothes. Brother, I sure do. I am pretty well air conditioned at the present time, and what I need is a new work outfit. I don't care if the pants have cuffs. All I care is that my pants have a front and back in them and no holes in the stern sheets."

That's America and I'm sure glad I am an American. It could only happen here. Let's all keep it that way."

Doron arranged to have the clothes made to order and delivered to Wolfkell.

In Egypt the British Eighth army, stiffened with hard-fighting Australians, withdrawn from the middle east, beat off heavy axis attacks on their newly won positions west of El Alamein. The desert skies were filled with aircraft as aerial warfare was intensified over the 50-mile battle line from the coast south to the Qattara depression.

While the heaviest fighting centered on the northern sector, patrol actions were under way along the liquid southern front where Gen Sir Claude Auchinleck's reinforced imperial troops were warding off axis tanks and motorized infantry units.

On the European front the RAF smashed again at the German industrial Ruhr cities during the night in a strong attack. Five planes were missing, and the losses indicated that 200 to 300 bombers had participated in the raids.

Jaycees To Draw Plans For Send-Off Sessions

Definite arrangements for staging send-off parties for men who are inducted into the Army in the future will be discussed Tuesday at a meeting of the Junior Chamber of Commerce. The club will ask cooperation of all Circleville civic groups in making the project a success.

Under new Army regulations every inducted man who is accepted for military training is released from active service at the induction center for 14 days, unless he prefers to leave immediately for the Army reception center.

Inductees who take advantage of the furlough and leave the induction station may return to Circleville in a group under an acting corporal. At the end of their furloughs they will convene at the local Selective Service headquarters where the acting corporal will be authorized to furnish transportation back to the reception center. This cost is paid by the government.

During the period of furlough the men will be carried on the enlisted reserve list of the Army without pay but ordered into active service 14 days after the first effective day of the furlough. While on the reserve status the men will be under the jurisdiction of the Army.

This new procedure eliminates many disadvantages of the old system. Every man who is drafted into the Army will have an opportunity to return home without being required to give his reasons for doing so. Investigations and recommendations by the local board for extending furloughs are no longer necessary.

Bad blood between the two families had existed for some time, however. About a year ago Redmond had been charged with shooting and wounding the young bridegroom and his wife's father, Crawford McNabb, and members of the Parsons family had testified against Redmond, his brother and his father in a whisky case in federal court.

Previously the young bride had accused Redmond of tipping off revenue agents that she and her family were making moonshine.

Last Saturday both clans, armed with rifles and shotguns, gathered at the cross roads store, authorities said. Redmond, investigating officers said, slapped the young bride's face when she accused him of hi-jacking whisky from her and her husband.

The two families immediately took up positions on either side of a bridge and opened fire. Police said about 20 shots were fired, none of the shots except the girl's taking effect.

Officers were puzzled over the girl's marksmanship. They explained the others probably were merely trying to frighten each other.

When police arrived at the scene, the women threw down their weapons and started a hair-pulling battle, county officers said. It took a quarter of an hour to part the women, they added.

PEARL HARBOR HERO GETS BARS

Joseph Lockard, who, as a private stationed near Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, was the only man to detect approach of the Jap planes, now has received his reward. He is pictured, left above, as Brig. Gen. George L. Van Deusen pinned the single gold bars of a second lieutenant on his shoulders at Fort Monmouth, N. J., where Lockard graduated from officers' candidate school in the signal corps. Lieutenant Lockard's bride smiles proudly, center. Lockard, working in free time, heard the Jap planes through an aircraft detector, but his warning went unheeded.

Ersatz Pouch

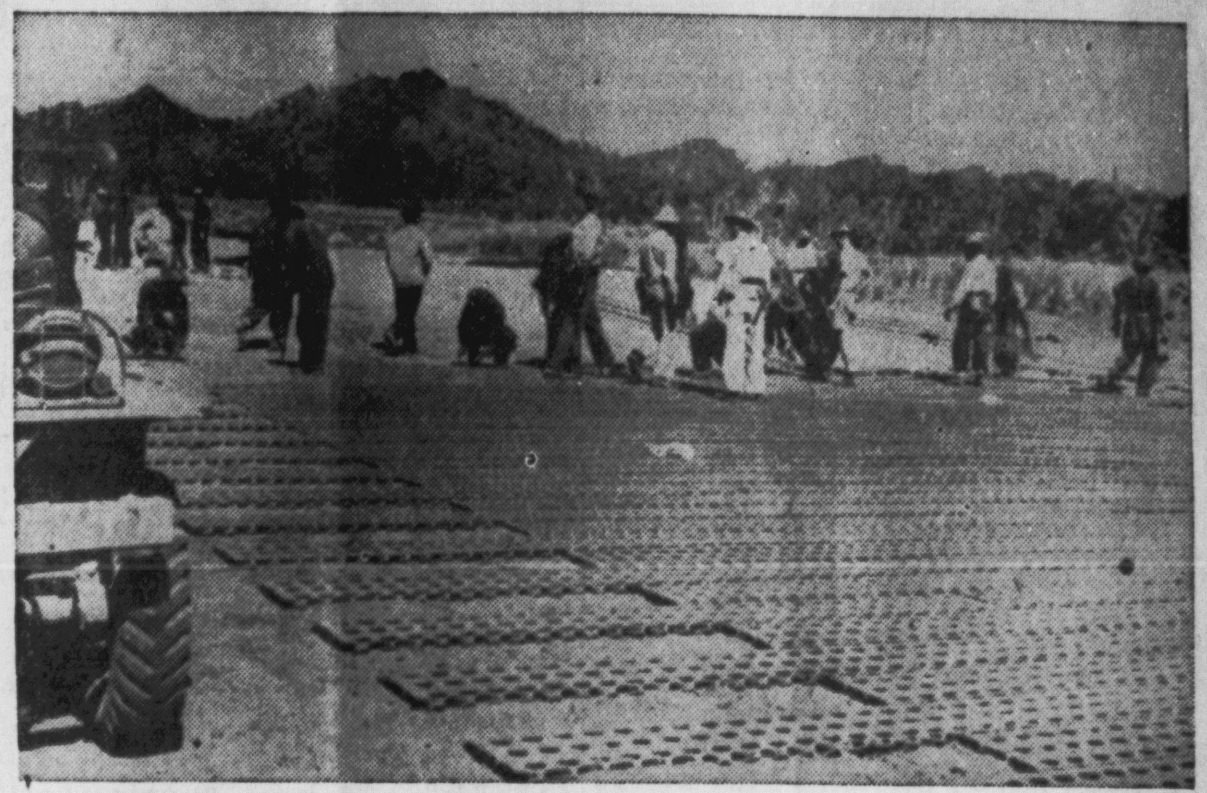

The new mascot, a tiny kangaroo, created the near-panic among American sailors, adopting this ersatz pouch, apparently the little marsupial is content but the ship's cat, mascot of an American fighting force now on duty in the southwest Pacific, hasn't quite decided how to treat the new mascot.

How Bund Drilled Its Youth

This is a copy of one of the photographs in possession of the FBI showing some of the activities of the German-American Bund at Camp Bergwald, near Bloomingdale, N. J. This one shows a youth group, modeled after Hitler's Jugend (Youth Corps) being drilled at the camp. There were children from eight to eighteen in the group. Note the swastika is flown beside the American flag. The latest raid on Bund members in the New York metropolitan area netted 158 men and women.

AEF Builds Airport for New Guinea Defense

American negro troops are shown laying steel mats which form a runway for American fighter planes at a New Guinea airport. Sections are ten feet long and two feet wide and hook together. This outpost, north of Australia, has been strengthened by the arrival of U. S. troops. They are under the command of General MacArthur.

Farms Serve a Double Purpose in Australia

This might be a peaceful countryside scene in the United States, if it were not for the camouflaged gun protruding skyward in the background. The photo shows American soldiers doing a bit of gardening at their Australian base. The work helps them pass spare time and provides fresh vegetables for mess.

"PAINTS" WITH BURNING MATCHES

George Fayko, Philadelphia commercial artist, puts the finishing touches, above, on a portrait of Arturo Toscanini, famous symphony orchestra conductor, which he "painted" with burning matches. Fayko used 1,500 matches to make the portrait, utilizing the three basic colors produced by burning matches—black, bronze and flesh.

BREAD AND BUTTER

IT IS interesting to know that with an area of seven percent of that of the whole earth, and a population also seven percent of the world's population the United States has 63 percent of the world's petroleum, 38 percent of its iron ore, 34 percent of its coal, 15 percent of its sugar, 14 percent of its wheat and four percent of its potatoes.

It looks as if Americans could get along. If they fall short of potatoes, they can eat bread, and certainly they can keep warm with the coal.

The petroleum is what gets the easterners down right now. There it is — and here, where they want it, it ain't. Nor is there any rubber. Well, hardly any.

But there's butter for the bread, and plenty of fruit, and most of the rest of the world would be quite satisfied just to be able to stay at home and eat plenty of bread and butter, apples, peaches and oranges.

THE RUBBER BATTLE

WITH all these reports of improved methods for making artificial rubber, surely public authorities and private producers should be settling down and getting on the job in a bigger way. There doesn't appear to be much team work about it, or much haste, either at Washington or in the rubber factories. Yet here is a situation comparable in importance to the winning or losing of a great battle. It is an industrial battle almost as important as steel production.

There seems to be a curious lack of responsibility, too, on the part of the public. There is somewhat less driving, but millions of drivers are on the road unnecessarily, or running at unnecessary speed, and wearing out existing tires just as if they hadn't a care in the world about such matters.

MORE REINDEER

SANTA Claus may not have so many toys in his pack this Christmas, but he will have plenty of reindeer to take him wherever he wants to go. The herds in the Canadian Arctic continue to increase. An estimate has been turned in of 1,000 fawns this Spring. The herds in the Northwest Territories are believed to contain about 10,000 reindeer.

The new-born fawns stand the cold of the Arctic Circle very well. They are on their feet and walking a few hours after they are born, and from 85 to 90 percent of them survive. The reindeer are tough little animals, useful as well as ornamental. It is good to know the herds are more than holding their own.

Vitamins are as important as ideology in winning this war.

Pages From the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:

Up to anxiously scan the morning prints and found there was nothing except bad news. The fawns have fallen back again, and the consolidation of the territorial gains, no change in the situation in Egypt, a German diplomat just back to Germany tells of a Hun quarrel over more taxes, turning on manufacturing, dis- of possible necessity of stituting private automobiles.

ST. definitely bad, the entire office came a repre- of the Ohio Council of was checking on local organization progress and finding it satisfactory. Declared that the army is definitely interested in local defense organization throughout this entire area and is urging speed and more speed in preparation, particularly as regards air wardens and fire watchers. And some new blocks in the village are entirely without air raid wardens or fire watchers, not because of a lack of effort on part of the council, but because of a lack of interest and refusal to serve by some citizens.

The only protection provided citizens in any part of the village is provided by the air raid wardens and the fire watchers. Persons interested in the safety of themselves and their property certainly will not be wasting time in determining whether or not air raid wardens and fire watchers for their district are in service.

Air raid wardens after completion of their training will visit each home and tell citizens how to prepare raid shelters, how to guard against gas, how to fight incendiary bombs, will tell them the location of first aid stations, will assist in every way possible to provide every measure of protection. Fire watchers will assist in the fighting of fires resulting from raids and their effort very likely will be the only assistance provided a citizen, for in the event of an emergency three-fourths of all fire fighting apparatus must be kept in reserve by the fire chief. Think that over. Maybe you will need some assistance.

Maybe we will not be raided in this district, but the army is not so certain as many citizens. "Get ready for anything," is the official word, and to the extent of its ability the local Defense Council is doing that.

Heard of several groups being organized independently for first aid service in the event of emergency. National regulations provide that in the event of an emergency only Civilian Defense workers wearing C. D. arm bands will be permitted on the streets. Severe penalty attaches to violation of the order. So, persons wishing to participate in the local effort must register, must take special courses of instruction, must prepare themselves to be of value. Without training you would only handicap the trained workers.

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON

SYNTHETIC RUBBER

WASHINGTON — In a previous Merry-Go-Round column it was revealed that Jesse Jones's Rubber Reserve, which is supposed to provide the nation with rubber, had let 31 contracts for big synthetic rubber plants to one patent pool; that other, quicker patents for making rubber had been ruled out; and that the 31 big new plants, each costing $10,000,000, would not be finished and working until around 1944.

This, it was revealed, was one of the reasons behind the White House warning that civilian tires might have to be requisitioned.

Continuing the story, it is necessary to go back and review some significant and not generally known background.

Two years ago there was a loud public clamor when it was discovered that Tokild Rieber, chairman of the board of the Texas Oil Company, had loaned an automobile to Dr. Gerhard Westrick, a Nazi commercial agent in New York. So great was the outcry, that the Board of Directors forced Rieber's resignation from Texas.

But what is not generally known is that the president of the Texas Development Company, a subsidiary of Texas, is now in the Government and is Jesse Jones's key man on rubber contracts. Furthermore, this man, Richard J. Dearborn, was at the Hague in October, 1939, one month after war broke, where he helped negotiate with the Nazis a new contract continuing Hitler's monopoly on synthetic rubber — a monopoly which is charged with preventing American development of synthetic rubber.

Dearborn's company, Texas, is a part of what is called the "Jersey" pool, or the group of oil companies dominated by Standard Oil of New Jersey which received the contracts for the 31 new rubber plants from Jesse Jones's Rubber Reserve. In helping to award these contracts to the companies with which he was once affiliated, Dearborn, together with other Rubber Reserve officials and Jesse Jones, passed up several other important rubber processes considered by many scientists to be much quicker and cheaper.

TWO TYPES OF RUBBER

How Dearborn got his appointment and why the Standard-Texas group was so favored by Rubber Reserve is not known. Some observers point to the old friendship between William Farish, $144,000 president of Standard Oil of New Jersey, who knew Jesse Jones for years in Houston. Jones and Ross Sterling, then president of Standard's Humble Oil Company, were partners in various enterprises, and Farish, later president of Humble, grew up under them.

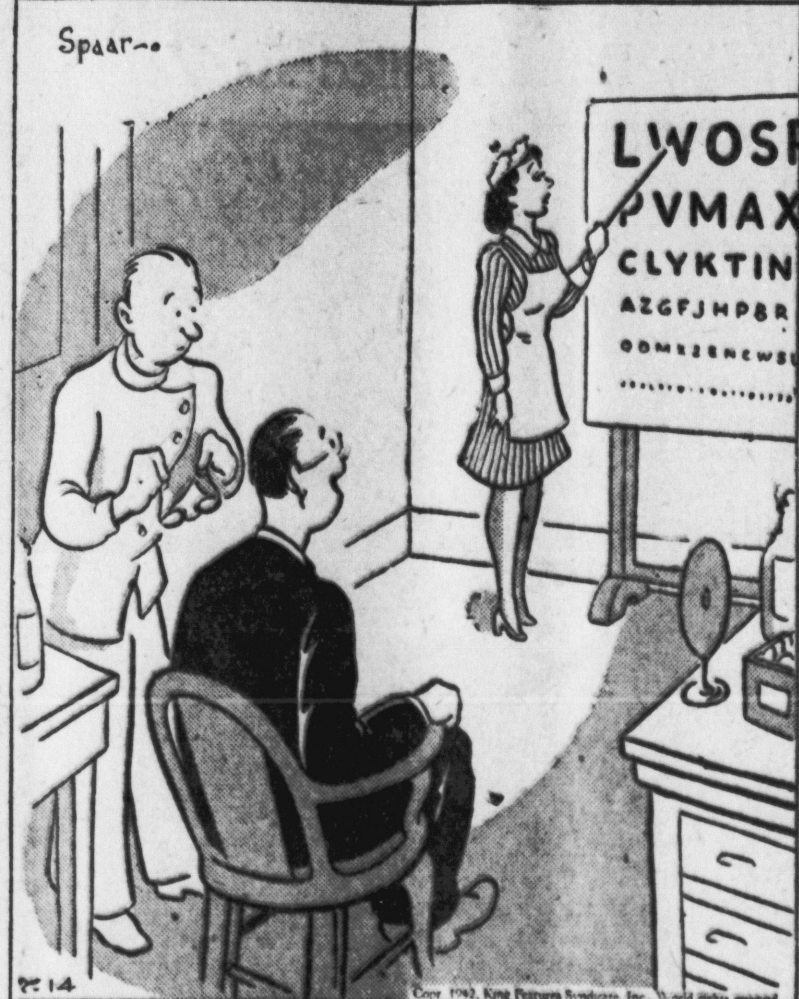

On the other hand, some point to the fact that Standard Oil of N. J.'s patent pool with the Germans made their synthetic rubber patent the most logical one to use.

Actually, though most people don't realize it, Standard of N. J. had two types of rubber regarding which it was cooperating with Germany. One was buna rubber, which was the product of a slow process. The other was butyl rubber, which is newer, cheaper and quicker.

Regarding these two types, here is the inside story of what happened. About ten years ago, Standard of N. J. acquired I. G.

Holds That Worry Causes Many Cases of Stomach Ulcer

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

THE IDEA THAT patients with ulcer of the stomach have a certain bodily form or constitution which influences them to acquire that condition has long been dabbled with by different physicians. For instance, Dr. George Draper of New York, whose studies in human constitutions are well known, has felt that ulcer patients have a certain type of jaw and face which prevents their masticating their food as well as others and therefore throws undigested masses of food into the stomach.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

Natural Worriers

In his most recent study he has called attention to the mental life of these patients. He believes that they are natural worriers and this has as much influence on the development of the ulcer as any other factor. It is, of course, well-known along this line that mental upsets and worry will increase the amount of acidity in the stomach and also make movements of the stomach more rapid and irritable, and sometimes worry will entirely slow down the digestive processes to a practical stoppage.

He has a number of histories which show that episodes such as a hemorrhage or an internal hemorrhage or a relapse of symptoms are associated with upsets in the mental life of the patients. One man had a quarrel with his employer, lost his job and the next day there was evidence of an internal hemorrhage. Another was a traffic cop who was arrested for dangerous driving and the night after that his stomach pains began and lasted for six or eight weeks.

The examination of the whole mental life history of these patients reveals that they are often either incompatible or difficult to suit in the way of jobs, do not get along with parents, brothers, sisters, or in domestic relations generally.

LEAVE HIM NO DOUBT

ONCE YOU have failed to open the bidding, it may require great care to inform your partner that your hand is of appreciable strength, virtually good enough for an opening. Unless you have played with him before and know just how he will interpret certain calls by you, you should endeavor to select one which will eliminate any possibility of doubt. The bidding given above covers the sad story of two North-South pairs which failed to reach the slam bid on this deal. In each case, the fault was North's.

Where West passed South's 1-Heart, North was a player to whom a double jump of 3-Hearts meant a guarantee of game.

strength opposite a minimum in spite of the fact that he had passed originally. South could not see it that way and so with his extra strength bid a mere game. At that table, North could have made the slam simply by bidding 2-No Trumps on his first turn, which to any partner would mean that he had practically an opening bid, and then, when South rebid at 3-Hearts, and North showed a fit at 4-Hearts, South could have bid the slam without benefit of conventions.

At the table where West made his double for defensive purposes, North should not have jumped to 3-Hearts, but should have re-doubled on his first turn, and the slam would have been easy to reach after that.

REAR END ASSOCIATION

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

LATER, WHEN Claire brought the car to a stop in front of the Ardendale inn, she reminded Bill of the dinner and the picnic.

"We'll have fun!" she said. "Don't get so interested in Grandfather Weston's paintings that you forget your social obligations."

"I won't," Bill assured. "And thanks a lot for the sight-seeing. Mightily fine country you-all got, Honey Chile, if anyone should drive up in a little red wagon and ask you."

"Idiot!" Claire drove off. Bill strolled into the inn. He glanced at the time. He had an urge to telephone Dian, but hesitated. Pretty late now to be calling Ardendale girls.

"Have a good time?" Paul Peters inquired, coming in from the writing room.

"Fine!" said Bill. "There's something about this part of the country that gets a fellow."

"The girls?"

"Oh, they help, of course," said Bill. "But, speaking of scenery, that spot on the hilltop is—"

"Yes, I know. I've sat on it a thousand times. By the way, I dropped in on Dian Weston this evening."

"That did? Good."

"That girl likes you—she likes you a lot."

"Yes? I'm glad. I like Dian, too."

"Then why not see more of her?"

"She's got too many other things on her mind to give mere man her attention."

"That's not the way I heard it!" Paul said, laughing.

"No?"

"How about laying off my girl, and giving Dian some fun? She's had darned little of it."

Bill searched Paul's face. "Don't tell me you're giving up engineering for matchmaking," he said.

"Of course not. But Dian's a good friend of mine, and I think she deserves a break."

"You mean seeing a lot of me would be a break for her?"

"Sure. You can help by showing her a sort of rush while you're in Ardendale," Paul brightened. "Why don't you call her in the morning and ask her to show you the lake where we're going to have the picnic?"

"My car's still out of commission."

"Well, here isn't."

Bill shook his head slowly. "Boy, you're full of ideas, aren't you?" he said.

"Listen, Bill," Paul said, "be a pal."

Bill walked to the elevator. "I've got some letters to write," he said. "See you at breakfast."

All during the night Bill kept waking to think about Dian and Claire. And about Ardendale, New York, his work—about this and that and the other thing, Claire, Paul, Dian and himself. Four confused people in a small southern town. A triangle—and an extra side to spare! Maybe if he got out of town, things would work out better. After all, Paul did have priority, if such a thing really counted where a girl was concerned. Yes, perhaps the thing for him to do was pack up and get back to New York where he belonged. Anyway, he would go over to the garage the first thing in the morning and see what news there was about the spring for his car.

This he did.

"I had to order one from Richmond," the garageman said. "I'm afraid I'll be a couple of days getting it."

"Very well," Bill said. "Just telephone me at the inn when you have any news." He turned to walk out, and faced Dian, who was just alighting from her own car. "Don't tell me you've got a broken spring!" he said.

"No, just after some gas," Dian said. "Had a lot of running around today, and ran out. Now I've got to deliver some candy for Aunt Martha." She nodded toward the car.

"Oh, yes, come on and meet her."

"I'd love to," Bill said.

Presently Dian was introducing the two, and watching her aunt's face.

"I heard someone say," Bill remarked, "that when one took a taste of your candy, Miss Weston, he either remained in Ardendale or eventually returned."

Miss Martha was pleased. "Well, I wouldn't say it was that good," she said. "Although I do flatter myself that I make mighty good fudge and divinity."

"I hear there's magic in it," Bill said. "Have you an extra box to dispose of?"

"No, I'm sorry I haven't. But there are some leftover pieces out at the house. You're welcome to that."

"The leftover will be plenty good enough for me," Bill replied.

"We'll go get it," said Dian, her heart singing, "just as soon as I get my gas and deliver the candy to the bank."

The garageman got busy, and in a short while the car was moving off. Bill sat in front of the car, but he turned sideways so that he could talk with Miss Martha.

"My niece was telling me," said Miss Martha, "that you looked at some of my father's paintings."

"I did," said Bill. "I want to see some more of them when it's convenient for me to go out again."

"Dian can take you out just as soon as the candy's delivered, if you've nothing else to do."

"I've nothing at all. I'm waiting for my car to be repaired." Bill looked at Dian. "Is it all right with you, Dian?"

"Quite," said Dian. "After my battle with the candy, I could use a little country air." She turned the car in at the curb. "You two sit here while I run in to see Jerome. I'm not sure he wants the candy left here. He may want it delivered somewhere else."

She hurried into the bank, and almost collided with Jerome.

"Come into my private office, Dian," he said. "I want to talk to you for a moment."

"But the candy," Dian said. I must get it."

"It can wait." Jerome took her arm gently, and led her down the hall. When they were in his office, he said, "I want you to do something for me, Dian."

"Yes, Jerome. What is it?"

"I want you to act as hostess Thursday night—at the club."

"But, Jerome, I—"

"Just a moment, please, my dear. A very important man and his wife are to be in town, a man I'm trying to interest in a big business deal, and I want to impress them. You know, with the importance of Ardendale, and—"

"And your connection with it," said Dian. "I understand that, Jerome. But just where do I come in?"

"Being a bachelor is a little difficult under certain circumstances," Jerome said. "I mean—I can't entertain in my home very well—living there alone—so I want to give a nice dinner for four at the club. I want you to make the fourth, and sort of—act—as hostess for me. You know, almost as though you were my wife—or—cousin—or—something."

"I see."

Hints on Etiquette

For Tuesday, July 14

THE AUGURIES based on this day's mutual and lunar aspects bespeak a pleasant, profitable and progressive day, with all things moving toward the goal of happiness and accomplishment. It is possible that the domestic, social or sentimental, as well as the artistic and cultural, affiliations will claim paramount attention, although business of a productive and enduring nature may be under excellent stimulus for success. Affairs out of the customary routine may flourish and find stability, through strange contracts, or probably in collaboration with large or secret organizations or influential friends.

Those whose birthday it is may count upon a year of happy, progressive, prosperous and gratifying events, with some things stirring in unusual grooves or in conjunction with strangers, that may bring surprising denouements. Influential persons, elders and old or secret institutions may contribute to success and enduring good fortune. However, the major interests and activities of the year may revolve around the private life, social, domestic and artistic, with romantic or affectional eliminations occupying the spotlight. Altogether a prosperous, happy and worthy year as well as an adventurous one may be expected.

A child born on this day should be blessed with excellent endowments of mind, heart and spirit, equipping it for a prosperous, happy eventful, rich and useful life.

25 YEARS AGO

Ohio was to send 40,498 men to war under new census figures.

Dr. and Mrs. O. H. Dunton and daughters, Florence and Helen, left on a two-month motor trip through the New England states. They were to visit Sewell Dunton at Cambridge, Mass., where he was encamped with the Harvard university officers reserve corps.

With the revival of vaudeville it may now be possible to hear all those old radio jokes delivered in person.

Quite appropriate additions to the war scrap collection would be the rubber boats in which those Nazi agents transferred from U-boats to our shores.

For once age and beauty go hand in hand. A new chemical formula is said to add life and looks to women's hose.

In these times Sunday should be the day of rest—especially for your auto tires.

If Aesop, the old Tortoise-and-the-Hare man, were alive today he'd probably write the fable (only it wouldn't be a fable!) of the hovering Blimp and the speedy U-boat.

2. For what words are the letters "n. b." abbreviations?

3. What state borders on four of the Great Lakes?

Mother And Daughter Duets Feature Recital

Van Vliet Home Is Scene Of Monday Program

Featuring several mother and daughter duets, the recital of junior piano pupils of Mrs. Leon Van Vliet was very interesting and successful Monday when the group appeared in a varied program in the West High street studio. Garden flowers made a colorful background for the performance.

Mothers and daughters on the program were Mrs. Herschel Hill and daughter, Theresa, Mrs. Donald H. Watt and daughter, Nancy, Mrs. Neil Morris and daughter, Kathryn June, Mrs. Robert Wilkin and daughter, Joan, and Mrs. John Miller and daughter, Marilyn. Mrs. V. D. Kerns and her small son, Eugene, were also included in the duet program.

The recital was planned to show the work of the children in solos, duos, and quartets, and the choice of selections were especially happy. Mrs. Van Vliet was heard in duet numbers with several of the pupils.

A large group of parents and friends gathered for the first of the three recital periods, the mothers who took part in the program serving as assisting hostesses.

The second recital, Tuesday at 8 o'clock, will find the primary pupils on the program with a few of the advanced students assisting.

The interesting program includes selections by Donna Jean Kerns, Vera Jane Rhoades, Nell Louise Bumgarner, Opal Kirby, Carolyn Reichelderfer, Theresa Hill, Jacqueline Eitel, Ann Thompson, Beverly Poor, Patricia Ann Howell, Sandra Raymond, Louise Gray, Shirley Blake, Leontine Jones, Mary Ann Woodward, Gordon Blake, Patty Mavis, Eugene Kerns, Marilyn Porter, Marjorie Dreisbach, Marilyn Schumm, Betty Lou Helwegen, Lola Mayne Reedy, Dee Early, Rose Mary Mumaw, Larvene Arledge, Clara Davis, Lois Radcliffe, Eileen Martens, Blanche Eileen Wolfe, Paul Helwegen, Joan Cook and James Hill. Mrs. Herman Hill will assist Mrs. Van Vliet at this period.

The Tuesday evening recital will begin at 8:30 o'clock. The senior group of Mrs. Van Vliet's pupils will be heard at this time.

Playing will be Nell Louise Bumgarner, Annette Thomas, Gloria Reid, Doris Hulise, Joan Cook, Patsy Winks, Polly Kerns, Robert McCoy, Ermalou Younk, Elizabeth Hoffman, Paul Helwegen, Marjorie Dreisbach, Glenn G. McCoy, Ann Bradley, Mrs. Carl Burger, James Hill, Harriet Heffner, Mrs. Paul Thompson and Eleanor Bumgarner.

Miss Jane Paul will be assisting hostess for the evening recital.

OHIO SPORTSMEN PICK MANSFIELD FOR CONVENTION

COLUMBUS, July 14—The League of Ohio Sportsmen will hold its Summer conference at the Leland-Mansfield hotel in Mansfield, Sunday, August 23, it was announced today by Secretary Tudor Wilson, following an executive committee meeting in Columbus.

A 10-point program will be placed before the league's representative body at that time. Louis Bromfield, noted author from Lucas, O., will be one of the principal speakers at Saturday's pre-conference ceremonies, which will be under the supervision of local officials.

The executive committee adopted two resolutions in its all day session which will be submitted to the state division of conservation and natural resources.

The excess of game in view of the army of hunters that have been called by the armed forces must be harvested in some way, and the league is recommending to the conservation department that either the season be extended, the bag limit be increased or a combination of the alternatives be effected. The other issue that the league is advocating is the legalization of archery methods in killing deer which are migrating into Ohio from Pennsylvania.

At present there is no statute permitting the killing of deer in Ohio, but the league feels that with a heavy influx of the animals necessitates some measure which will aid in the preservation of farm property which might otherwise be destroyed.

SERVIS IS OUT, SO STRANAHAN TOPS GOLF TILT

CINCINNATI, July 14—With numerous potential threats still on the absentee list, Frankie Stranahan, 20-year-old Toledoan, appeared headed for his second straight state amateur crown today as the annual event got under way at Maketewah Country Club.

Close to 190 of Ohio's leading play-for-pleasure players were to fight it out today in the qualifying round to determine the other 63 players that will comprise the championship flight along with the defending titlist.

Definite news that Bobby Servis, Dayton club-wielder, will not compete boosted Stranahan's stock considerably while Maurice McCarthy, perennial Cincinnati contender, still had his entry in the problematical stage. Last year McCarthy went 38 holes with the youthful Toledo champ in the finals of the event.

Two top-flight publiclinksters from Columbus, Dick Rhyhan and Bill Podolski, loom as the chief worries for Stranahan. Rhyhan, who won the state pay-for-play crown last year, and Podolski, Rhyhan's principal foe around the Buckeye capital, are expected to wage a hot battle for the crown.

LEO BELITTLES PROTEST OVER MACON IN UNIFORM

PITTSBURGH, July 14—Manager Leo Durocher, of the Brooklyn Dodgers, today belittled the Pirates' protest of the first game of last Sunday's double header which Brooklyn won 2 to 1.

The Pirates had protested the game to National League President Ford Frick because the Dodgers had 26 men in uniform sitting on the bench. The extra man was Pitcher Max Macon, who, Durocher said, is the property of the Montreal club and was with the Dodgers Sunday solely for a tryout.

"No rule, so far as I can see, was broken," the Brooklyn pilot said. "We merely let Macon sit on the bench and, of course, had no intention of playing him. I think I know the rules."

Matter Of Five Cents To Cost Track $200,000

DOVER, Del., July 14—Although only five cents was involved in the suit, Delaware Park today faced the possibility of having to surrender an estimated $200,000 of the "breakage" it pocketed on horse race bets since the ultra-modern race track opened four years ago.

In upholding a lower court's judgment, the supreme court, Delaware's highest appellate bench, ruled the track used an illegal method of computing "breakage."

Arthur W. Wise, Wilmington handicapper and president of the Delaware Race Players' Protective association, instituted the suit, claiming he was entitled to a payoff of $6.30 on a $5 show bet instead of the $6.25 proffered by the track.

"Breakage" is the custom, followed at all pari-mutuel tracks, of keeping the odd pennies in paying off bets. At Delaware Park, breakage is figured on each dollar bet and the courts upheld Wise's contention that it should be figured on the basis of the amount paid for the mutual ticket—$2, $5, $10 or $50.

On Wise's bet the payoff figured $1.26 for each $1 wagered. He conceded the track was entitled to pay off at $1.25 because of the breakage, but contended that since his bet was of $5, there was no breakage because five times $1.26 comes to the even figure of $6.30.

Wise estimates that the track has illegally taken in $200,000 as "breakage," and, he added: "I will not rest until the track is forced to disgorge the entire sum illegally collected. It is now up to the racing commission to demand an accounting and see that the money is turned over to the state treasury, since it cannot be returned to the bettors."

"If this is not done, we will ask the state legislature to recover the money. If this fails, we will take other action."

YANKS MOVING AHEAD; GORDON REGAINS LEAD

New Yorkers Hold Edge Of Five Games; Masterson Halts Indians

By International News Service

Joe Gordon is back in the lead for the American league batting championship today and the Yankees are five games ahead of the Boston Red Sox in the American league pennant race as the clubs in that circuit hit it up and down the stretch of the campaign.

Gordon hit "four for four" yesterday against the Detroit Tigers to lift his average to .347, or three points above Ted Williams of the idle Red Sox.

Thus while the Boston entry enjoyed an off-day it lost both a half game to the league-leaders and the top spot in the batting race previously held by Williams.

Protection Of Family Relationship Stressed By Draft Chief.

HERSHEY CITES NEW POLICIES FOR INDUCTION

Instructions Go To Boards Of Nation Concerning Seven Divisions

34 OCCUPATIONS VITAL

All Registrants Who Do Not Have Dependents Will Be Drafted "Rapidly"

Deferment from the draft of thousands of men heretofore eligible for military service loomed Tuesday following a new statement of policy issued by National Selective Service Director Lewis B. Hershey.

Instructions were sent to draft boards throughout the country to consider deferment of men who live in a "family relationship," and if the marriage took place prior to December 8, 1941, even though they do not contribute to the support of other members of their families.

Previously, it was provided that a registrant, to be considered as having dependents, must have one or more persons depending on his earned income for support.

Hershey emphasized that the fundamental purposes of the draft law are procurement of sufficient men for the armed forces and maintenance of production essential to win the war, but declared: "Insofar as is practical in carrying out these requirements, the bona fide family relationship of registrants would be protected as long as possible."

34 Occupations Listed
Great emphasis, at the same time, was placed on the position of men who are engaged in civilian activities having directly to do with winning the war. Thirty-four occupations, specified by the War Manpower Commission, were listed as contributing to war effort so that "necessary men" so engaged might be deferred from military service.

Hershey said, however, that all registrants without dependents of any kind are to be selected for induction "as rapidly as they can be made available."

The draft chief established the following order in which seven classifications are to be utilized for calling draft registrants into the Army, taking into account their dependency status and activity in connection with the war effort:

1. Single men with no dependents.
2. Single men who do not contribute to the war effort but who have dependents.
3. Single men with dependents who contribute to the war effort.
4. Married men who are not engaged in the war effort but who maintain a bona fide family relationship with a wife only.
5. Married men who are engaged in the war effort and who maintain a bona fide family relationship with a wife only.
6. Married men who are not engaged in the war effort and who maintain a bona fide family relationship with wife and children or children only, and.
7. Married men who are engaged in the war effort and who maintain a bona fide family relationship with wife and children or children only.

It was emphasized that the regulations do not alter the statutory ban on group deferments.

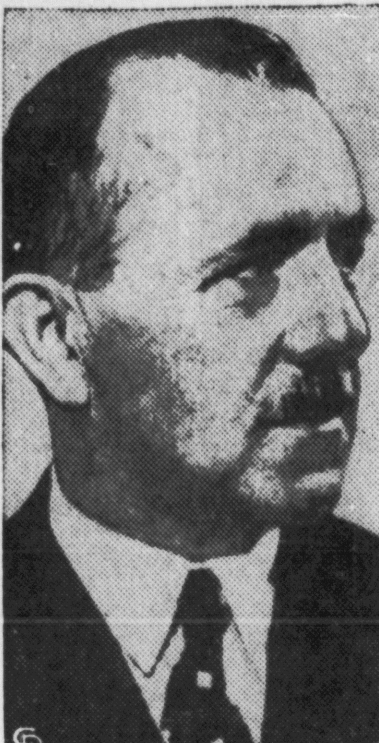

War Activities Listed

The essential war activities named for guidance of the local boards are production of aircraft, ships, boats, ordnance, and ammunition, agriculture, food processing, forestry, logging and lumbering, construction, coal mining, metal mining, nonmetallic mining, smelting, refining and rolling of metals, production of metal shapes and forgings, finishing of metal products, production of industrial and agricultural equipment, machinery, chemicals and allied products, rubber products, leather products, textiles, apparel, stone, clay and glass products, petroleum, natural gas and petroleum and coal products, finished lumber products, transportation equipment, transportation services, production of materials for packing and shipping products, production of communication equipment, communication services, including telephone, telegraph, newspapers, radio broadcasting and television services and the repair of such facilities, heating, power and illuminating services, facilities and equipment, educational services, and government services.

Under the new procedure, local boards are instructed to exhaust the supply of men in one classification before reclassifying registrants in the next group.

Now is the time for every good man to stick to his job.

He is also reported by Kerns to have tried to set the boy's hair on fire.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Farbenindustrie's patent on buna rubber with the understanding it would not be made in the United States; while I. G. Farben acquired Standard's patent on synthetic gasoline with the understanding it would not be made outside Germany.

Once Hitler came into power he proceeded to make both synthetic gasoline and buna rubber in Germany and make a great deal of it—obviously in preparation for what he knew was coming.

That Standard Oil of N. J. clearly knew why Hitler wanted to keep buna rubber from being developed outside Germany can be proved beyond any doubt. For on April 4, 1938, at a time when Roosevelt was sending notes to Hitler warning him regarding Austria, Spain and Czechoslovakia, Frank Howard, head of Standard of N. J. Development Corporation, reported that Germany had not surrendered full information regarding buna rubber, and refused because of "military expediency to permit I. G. to reveal such information to anyone outside Germany."

Frank Howard, incidentally, is the figure who flits in and around Washington constantly and has had more to do than any other private oil man with the 31 big rubber contracts going to Standard, Texas and affiliates.

GAVE IT TO HITLER

It was at about this time that Bill Sparks, scientist for Standard of N. J., discovered a new form of rubber called isobutylene, generally referred to as butyl, which could be made much quicker and cheaper than buna.

And although Hitler had refused to give Standard the secrets on buna, Frank Howard hopped over to Berlin in March, 1938, just at the time of Hitler's invasion of Austria, and gave the Nazis this precious secret. All he got in return was I. G. Farben's promise that "it would endeavor to procure Hitler's consent for the exploitation of rubber-like products in the United States."

Some time after this, inventor Sparks resigned his meager $4,500 salary. But Howard, rushing back from another trip to Europe, protested that he was his most valuable man, and rehired him at a higher salary.

Meanwhile, Standard of N. J. was keeping this new, cheap butyl rubber very much a secret from American rubber companies. And on November 6, 1939, after war broke, Frank Howard wrote an inter-office memo stating: "There is a considerable temptation to publicize this butyl rubber development and to seek contact with the rubber companies on it immediately, but a sounder policy apparently is to confine the development to our own organization."

And it was not until March 7, 1940 that Frank Howard finally suggested letting Firestone use the butyl rubber process. This was two full years after Hitler had been given the secret, and at a time when U. S. war advisers were demanding that Jesse Jones get busy on rubber.

But what is not generally known is that Standard of N. J. is now charging the U. S. government a royalty on butyl rubber. Last March when the Justice department threatened prosecution, there was a lot of hillyhoo about Standard of N. J. giving its German rubber patents free to anyone who could use them.

But this is true only of the slower and more expensive buna rubber. Standard did not give butyl free. Anyone using this important patent, handed to Hitler four years ago, must pay a royalty for what is called the butyl "know-how."

These are some of the men who are now helping to guide the destinies of the United States regarding the most vital commodity it needs.

(More about rubber delays and who is behind them will follow soon.)

Marseillaise Banned As French Folk Observe Holiday; Conditions Related

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Today is Bastille Day, the greatest national holiday for Republican France. German authorities have forbidden demonstrations in either the occupied or unoccupied zone. But disorders are anticipated and the conditions of life in the unoccupied area, vividly described in the following exclusive dispatch, show clearly how a spark may someday kindle a full-fledged revolution among people underfed and oppressed. The dispatch was written by a correspondent who recently toured the unoccupied zone.)

By ERNEST ZAUGG

BERNE, Switzerland, July 14—

The people of France are commemorating Bastille Day today under orders from the German Gestapo forbidding any demonstrations whatever. The orders handed down from Paris making it illegal for the Sons of the Revolution to parade or sing the Marseillaise as they have done for decades on July 14 may be violated.

Or they may be accepted as just another of the daily vexations which plague the French people, vexations that vary in intensity in various areas. But everywhere there are quite enough to go around.

I have just returned to Berne after traveling through unoccupied France from Lyons to Marseilles and thence on to Toulouse and elsewhere.

The train from Marseilles to Toulouse was officially classed as an express. Hundreds of would-be passengers were left behind. Those who got aboard found the cars jammed with sweating women and screaming children flung together in hopeless disorder, as many on the floor as there were on seats.

Abandoning hope of obtaining accommodations in the ordinary cars, some travelers made a bee-line for the first-class cars which in ordinary times are left for the use of the average citizen when there is no room elsewhere. Their way was blocked by conductors who regretted most profoundly that the German "economic specialists," Gestapo agents and other Nazi officials, could not be disturbed, despite the fact their cars and compartments were half empty. Some found perches in freight and baggage cars. Others stayed behind.

Rode on Wine, Potatoes
From Aix-en-Provence to Avignon there was only a single bus driven by gas obtained from burning charcoal. I found a seat on a basket cask of bognol wine between a bag of potatoes and an old peasant who accompanied his spouse to market in person for fear they would be stolen.

Adolf Hitler's campaign of weakening and eventually exterminating "inferior races" is succeeding thus far in France. After the first few weeks my own layers of fat accumulated in comparatively well-off Switzerland had disappeared along with 20 pounds of weight—this despite the fact I had access to the best hotels and to the flourishing black market.

The average French hotel menu now consists of a meagre hors d'oeuvre of lettuce and radishes and two vegetables. Twice a week there is a microscopic ration of meat. A dab of cheese for dessert is a rarity. Sometimes one can get jelly for a treat, but the waiter takes an additional 300 grams of bread coupons from the ration card.

It is no wonder that the Germans in France need three ration cards instead of one. They sometimes make the rounds of three different hotels for a single meal.

Wine Becomes Rare

Wine, the staff of life for most Frenchmen, is exceedingly rare. Fruit is virtually non-existent because all is taken to make alcohol for Nazi Stuka planes and tanks. The black market solves problems for those with funds. But a single black market meal costs $3.50 and the average French white collar worker makes less than $30 a week.

Hunger revolts in France are frequent. When I was in Marseilles, a crowd broke into a food store by smashing the plate-glass window. Those who got in tossed canned goods and vegetables to those outside while the local police stood around and laughed.

The population is gradually slipping back to the bathing habits of the dark ages when it was believed that washing undermined the health. Soap is virtually unobtainable. More fastidious people travel on the outside platforms of street cars and buses for a reason which is obvious.

The chief topic of conversation in all classes is rationing. Nothing in the food line can be bought without coupons or "enrollment," the latter being a system of signing up in advance on certain days for food. When one does not sign up and buy his ration at a fixed time he loses his chance.

Even potatoes are rare. In the Vaucluse department a high state official gave a party at which he served potato slices on bread. It was regarded as a rare luxury.

France Fatigued

After a meal of soup, bread and vegetables one is satisfied for about an hour and then comes a leaden weariness which makes even hatred and resentment a difficult undertaking. The face of France today is one of haggard fatigue—dull eyes, sunken cheeks, pallid complexion.

Lyons, Marseilles and almost all the larger cities of the province are overcrowded. In the Cannibierie at Marseilles, where 30,000 defied the Germans and staged a noisy demonstration last Bastille Day, there frequently are more persons visible than on a Paris boulevard before the war. Where they sleep no one knows.

There is an intensification of intellectual life, but how much is genuine is open to question. In Paris there is an increase in art exhibitions. Such names as Matisse, Bourdelle, Rouault, Picasso and Jean Cocteau appear frequently. The theatre is thriving and books are selling like hotcakes to those who have the money.

But the books are heavily interlarded with Nazi propaganda. The theatricals are suspect also.

The noble Nazi boss, he has ten million men. He marches them about the world brings them back again. (In coffins.)
